The law that requires Alberta electoral boundaries to be based on population density needs to be changed. For example, The City Of Calgary currently has 15 elected representatives including the Mayor and Aldermen to represent the same population numbers as the proposed (up from 21) 23 MLA's. "On the ground" issues within large cities such as Calgary or Edmonton are taken care of by municipal political representatives, VERY few by an MLA. If the provincial government is serious about finding ways to reduce costs to taxpayers, they can start with themselves!
