

To the Alberta Electoral Boundaries Commission.

I would appreciate the Alberta Electoral Boundaries Commission renaming Dunvegan Central Peace to include Grant Notley's name, thus to be renamed as Notley Central Peace.

Grant Notley not only represented his riding, but the hopes and aspirations of thousands of Albertans all over the province from his election in 1971 until his tragic death on Oct 19, 1984.

Grant was widely respected by friend and opponent alike and worked tirelessly for this province all his life in active politics. If Laurence Decore, Ernest Manning, and Peter Lougheed deserve this honour so does Grant Notley. It is high time that Alberta paid tribute to political leaders of all parties that contribute to Alberta's political fabric and have allowed us to have democratic debate in this province. Especially in Grant's case when his life was ended in the act of representing his constituents and he held the title of Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition at this time.

I realize asking a Conservative dominated committee to put their partisan view aside for even a small moment is not likely to succeed.

I would suggest the committee

phone former Premier Peter Lougheed for his advice on this matter. I was at both funeral services for Mr. Notley and noticed the real grief on Peter Lougheed's face.

I saw powerful Conservative Cabinet Ministers such as Dave Russell, Marvin Moore, Neil Crawford, all in a state of grief and shock at Grant's death. The Calgary Herald recently held a contest on the most favourite Albertan of all time, and over 20 years since his death, Grant Notley was in the top 10 of the Albertans nominated.

The nominees were also from all walks of life, not just politicians.

I also wish to point out this was Calgary and not Edmonton.

So if you have any grace , respect, and non partisan dignity, my humble request should be granted.

Sincerely

Bob Borreson
