

To Whom it may concern.

The proposal concerning the alteration of the electoral boundaries in and about Grande Prairie leaves me puzzled.

Currently the ridings are both centred on Grande Prairie with extensive rural components. It seems to me that the change would make the rural components of both current ridings less sensitive to their voters and a great deal more difficult to manage and certainly more difficult for the candidates to communicate with the voters.

If the purpose is to produce a predetermined political outcome, and I see no chance of that happening, then I thought this action is illegal!

In England at least an action like this would be considered "gerrymandering" and is illegal.

Please provide me the reason behind this plan; and send me with times/locations of any meetings where these matters can be discussed.

G.L. Wylson.
